

March 28, 2020

Dear Spotlight students and teachers,
I want to give you an update on Spotlight 2020. First of all, thank you for inviting me into your classrooms this school year. Learning from your students (and you!) is the best part of my job.

About the Spotlight Celebration...

Right now, we can commit to a virtual Spotlight Celebration on May 17. Please send me pictures you took during museum visits and in the classroom. Encourage your students to document the process at home.

Spotlight Exhibitions

The Patio Gallery is a designated space for Spotlight exhibitions once we reopen. One possibility is mounting the first show with schools that currently have completed projects and then setting a later deadline for schools still in process. We will not ask you to bring artwork to the museum until it's safe to do so.

Continue Your Projects

Please consider continuing your projects remotely. Sue Fuller was an incredibly resourceful artist who used unusual materials. We can set an example by making great art with what we have. It does not have to be the same scale project, just a creative response to String Composition #W-253.

Digital Resources

Visit mcnayart.org/spotlight for digital resources to share with your students. There is an enhanced classroom presentation on Sue Fuller as well as links to images of sculptures and the 360° video. Email me to set up a time for a Zoom meeting with your students. We're frequently adding lessons to the #museumathome page.

Spotlight Submissions Form and Survey

Thanks to those of you who have submitted your Spotlight form and completed the Spotlight survey. We would love to hear from everyone.

Spotlight submissions form: Help us get an accurate number of schools for this year by submitting this form.

Spotlight Survey: The survey documents where you are on your projects, collects your input, and lets us know how we can support you right now. We'll use this to report to funders and for future grant requests.

Please get in touch if you have any questions.
